

Mr. Editor: I have read with interest the account of the death of the great journalist, and I am glad to hear that the country has lost a great man. With a brain worn out by constant labor, with an earnest desire to promote the welfare of the country, and with a heart broken by the loss of a most estimable and beloved friend, Mr. Greeley resigned his soul to his Maker. Too much cannot be said of him, for he was indeed a truly great man. It was by perseverance and a strict adherence to the truth, that he rose to be so prominent and highly respected a man. It is true that the politics of Mr. Greeley have been such as to stir up strife, and I may safely add, hatred in the breast of every true Southerner; but that is past—let "by gone be by gone." His course, and the noble and heroic manner in which he entered into the late contest, and the earnest desire exhibited upon his part to establish a government under which we could live, gained for himself many warm friends and admirers at the South, whom I know will pay him tributes of respect to his memory. In the death of Mr. Greeley, a most important question presents itself for consideration. How shall the electoral votes be cast that would have been for Mr. Greeley if he had lived? There are but two courses that can be pursued—either be cast for Grant, or in blank. Now, the question is, can the former course be adopted? Were not these gentlemen who to day cast their votes for President and Vice President of the United States, elected for a specific term? And would it be doing justice to them who conferred the honor upon them? And would it be respectful to him who now "rests from his labors?" I sincerely trust, that the electors who would have cast their ballots for that great and good man, Horace Greeley, will, in consequence of his death, cast them in blank.

Charleston is quite gay just at present—everybody seems to be stirring. Great preparations are being made for the consecration of our splendid new Masonic Hall, which takes place on the 10th inst. Several eulogies in respect of the late Charles M. Furman and others prominent in the Masonic Fraternity, will be delivered by several of our distinguished citizens. The occasion promises to be grand and very imposing.

Our streets and stores are filled morning and afternoon, by old and young, purchasing Christmas presents for the "loved ones at home." It is quite a pleasing sight to watch how carefully the girls select the latest styles of cravat, or some delicate colored kid glove, or some other useful as well as ornamental gift, (a Bible, perhaps,) for their dear fellows. It is so good and kind in them. Ought not to be very grateful to them for their kind consideration?

For the past two or three weeks our city has been infested with traveling shows of all descriptions, such as the "Australian Children," "Performing Birds," "Fat Girls," &c. I heard of a very handsome young man, finely proportioned, extensive black beard and moustache, remark that he (referring to the "fat girls") was his wife of a wife. Now, whether these words were the dictate of his heart, or whether his gallantry caused him to say so, I am unable to say.

The Enterprise Railroad, of which our funny little Representative, Tim Hurley, is the President, is progressing rapidly. The rail has already been laid in several of the streets on its route, and I think will shortly be completed. I have no doubt it will prove quite a useful institution to us.

The weather is quite changeable. Everything quiet in the city.

For the Greenville Enterprise.

Mr. Editor: The desire to be seen in print is a commendable one, and would doubtless produce better results were the "raw recruits" more careful in selecting subjects. It is never good policy to rush in a communication concerning a supposed evil, and fail in convincing the public that your effort amounts to more than an unlucky exposure of an individual grievance. I do not think "Uncle Sam" is one of the favored few who can trip gracefully the "light fantastic toe," for his strictures on dancing bear heavy on the "devotee," and are grinding on the less favored who have sisters and wives.

Without going into the history of the art, we will dissect his bughbear, using gloves if possible. "Degradation," a harsh term to use in connection with gentlemen and gentlewomen, for of course the "society" of which he writes is composed of such. The requirements of society demand that man should be occasionally thrown into the company of women. It is a law of nature that one should seek the other, and whether he do so by the quiet ingoing, or in the ball-room resplendent with animated faces and gaiety, he nevertheless works out the requirements of that law. The fact that he has "entered" to the ball room does not necessarily stamp him a gentleman, or give him the undoubted right to choose his partner where he will. As it is at home, so here—woman's will is law; and whether in the steady old quadrille or in the misty haze of the waltz, she is still a woman to be admired—a fair life picture, above criticism and above reproach. And he who can see, in her artlessness and joy, sought for suspicion, or any token of an influence that degrades her or society, would do well to submit to rigid self-examination. Concerning its effect on the health generally, his position is only tenable as far as an excess is injurious, as so is an excess of any other recreation, or labor, whether physical or mental. His idea of broken rest does not fit his subject very nicely, if he is a "courtier man," (and he is to be pitied if he is not.) I doubt not that he loses more rest, and causes others to do so, than he or they lose at the dance. Again, in the same paragraph, he recklessly hastens to a conclusion, forgetting the thermometer in this section of the country has never been below zero more than twice in the memory of the oldest inhabitant. If there is, as stated in Divine law, a time for all things, why cry out so loudly against this custom? Come, "Uncle Sam," be generous as well as just; don't set yourself up as an isolated guide-board, for the benefit of all your occasionally "light-minded" fellow creatures. The crowd, intent on business or pleasure of their own, seeking for it as they deem best, conscious of the integrity of their own manhood or womanhood, will never pause long enough to give the credit such a latter-day reformer may deserve. None of us always stand in sight of the warning marble that maps out a career, nor is it necessary we should—an enjoyment that is not sinful, recreation that bids us to forget once in a while that we wear heavy cares at heart, should not be so hastily and unjustly condemned. If dancing is sinful to you, don't persecute its votaries; remember, if you wish a thing, prescribe it. If you speak against it from observation, don't lend your presence to it hereafter; if from experience, remember 'tis only your opinion.
